An Australian story

A Nigerian student who arrived at Swinburne just seven months ago was a guest of honour at the Sydney Opera House recently where he received a prize for an essay recounting his anxious journey from the African desert to a modern Australian university.

Ishaku Lemu Haruna, from Gombe in Nigeria, was given the award from the Council for International Students Australia (CISA) for his essay, submitted in CISA's I am not Australian but I have an Australian story competition.

"I started my education under a tree, and now many years later I am studying at one of the world's prestigious universities," Haruna said.

"This was my first time leaving Africa and I had a lot of mixed feelings about how I was going to cope in a new country. It was also my first time integrating with another race, so I was quite nervous."
